PREFACE

THE name of this little volume tells its purpose. The questions, riddles, and games were composed by the author with one object in view — to render the study of the Bible a source of pleasure, and to create and intensify in the hearts of young and old, a greater love for the Book of Books. In circles of friends, or at home, in classrooms or at study groups, in clubs or at parties, this material can be used as means of profitable recreation and instruction.

The author is indebted to Rabbi Louis M. Epstein and Mr. Harry Brooks, for the valuable suggestions they have given, and to Jean Brotman Tock whose illustrations accompany this book.

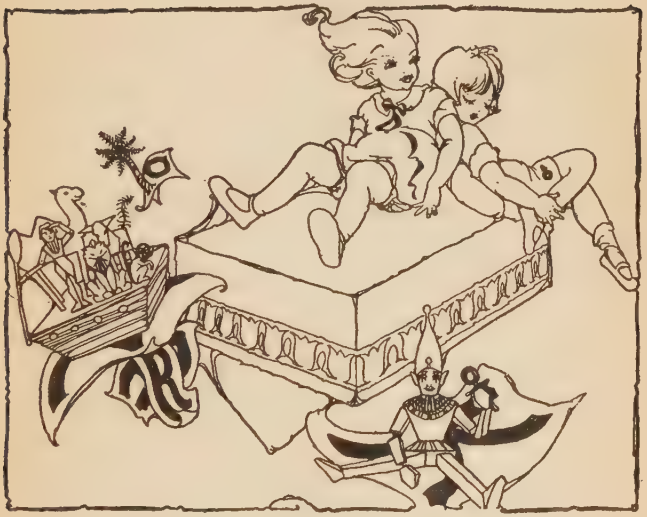
PART TWO:

SUGGESTIONS FOR GAMES



The following games and exercises are offered merely as suggestions and examples, permitting teachers and leaders to alter them and to construct others to suit their needs. Many of these games are original. Some have been adapted from old English and German games. All of these can be used to advantage at school and home.

I. NUMBERS

Provide each player with a card or a slip of paper with a number on it. The numbers used for this purpose are usually those that are frequently mentioned in the Bible in connection with some of the important events or narratives. Each player, when his turn comes, announces his number and names something or somebody suggested by his number. The one who is unable to name anything is withdrawn from the game. The one who names the largest number of subjects with his number is the winner.

Example: One player holds a card with the number 10 on it. He says: My number is ten. This reminds me of the following events in the Bible:

1. God gave the Jews ten commandments.
2. The Egyptians were afflicted with ten plagues.
3. Ten sons of Jacob went to Egypt to buy food.
4. Ten sons of Haman were hanged.

II. ANAGRAMS

This is an interesting game. It consists of forming a new word by transposing the letters of some given word. The same anagram may be given each player and the one discovering the new word first is the winner. If preferred, however, the whole list may be given to all the players and the one who will give the most correct answers is the winner.

The following list may be of interest. Additional lists can be composed by teachers and leaders.

1. Veil	A tribe
2. A lot	A judge
3. Bone	A mountain
4. The lion	A judge
5. Go	A king
6. A job	A captain
7. Masons	A judge
8. And	A tribe
9. Hurt	A Moabite
10. Hears	A tribe

III. JUDGES

A sheet of paper with the following questions concerning the Judges shall be distributed among the players, allowing them a certain time to give the answers. The one who has the most correct answers is the winner.

1. How many judges did we have?
2. Which judge of Israel was also a high priest?
3. Who was the strongest and bravest judge?
4. Who was the last judge?
5. Which judge had thirty sons and thirty daughters?
6. Which of the judges came from the tribe of Zebulun?
7. Which judge had the same number of sons, mules and villages?
8. Who helped his people with an ox goad?
9. Who was the first judge?
10. What was the name of the left-handed judge?
11. Which judge was sent out from his home?
12. Name the only woman judge.

13. Which judge was a native of Bethlehem?
14. Who succeeded Abimelech as judge?
15. Which judge gave his soldiers a water test?
16. Which judge had forty sons and thirty grandsons?
17. Which judge wanted to become King?

IV. RELATIVES

A large set of cards is prepared with one Biblical name on each. These cards are shuffled and each player is given a certain number of cards leaving the rest in the center of the table face downward. The first player selects one of his cards and puts it on the table. The next player must give a card with a name of a person who is related to the one whose name was on the first card. This rule of relationship must be observed. No two cards shall be placed near another unless the relationship of the two persons can be established. If any player has no card of some relative he must take cards from the pack on the table until he finds one that will answer the purpose. The first one to dispose of all his cards is the winner.

V. JUST ONE WORD

This game is a very simple one. It consists of selecting a group of Biblical proverbs, each containing one common word. These proverbs are written on sheets of paper omitting the common word. The players have to find the missing word and fill in the blanks in the distributed sheets.

Example:

——— is better than rubies.

Buy ———, buy understanding.

Whoso loves ——— rejoices his father.

The Lord gives ———.

Happy is the man that found ———.

The fear of the Lord is the beginning of ———.

——— excels folly.

——— is better than strength.

Through ——— is a house built.

Say to ——— you are my sister.

VI. TRIBES

This exercise is similar to the game "judges." The following questions can be used for this purpose.

1. Which tribes gave the Jews no judges?
2. Which of the tribes had no inheritance in the land of Israel?
3. Name the largest and the smallest tribes.
4. Which of the tribes gave Israel his counsellors?
5. Which tribe gave Israel the strongest Jew?
6. Who of the founders of the tribes was likened by his father to a hind?
7. Which tribe was divided but not because of friction?
8. Which tribe was distinguished from the others by its pronunciation?
9. Which tribe was once at war with all the other tribes?
10. Which tribe furnished scribes and writers to Israel?
11. Which tribes took their inheritance east of Jordan?
12. Which tribes adhered to the house of David?
13. Name the leading tribe of the Kingdom of Israel.

VII. ANIMALS

A set of twenty-five cards is prepared for this game with one of the pictures or names of the animals, beasts and fowls mentioned in the Bible on each card. These cards are shuffled and one or more cards are given to each player. The players in turn have to rise from their seats and announce what animals or birds their cards represent. This must be supplemented by the narration of the Biblical event in which this animal is mentioned. If the player knows of more than one event in which the same animal is mentioned, he can relate it to the company receiving one point of credit for every answer. The one who has the largest number of points at the end of the game is the winner.

The same topic can be used in a different game. Lists of descriptive sentences similar to the one below are distributed among the players who have to write the names of the animals referred to in these sentences. The player who gives the largest number of correct answers is the winner.

Name the following animals, beasts or fowls:

1. A fowl that fed a prophet.
2. An animal made out of jewelry.
3. The first messenger.
4. The animal that was sent off into the wilderness.
5. An animal that rebuked his master.
6. Beasts that attacked children at Bethel.
7. A reptile that hurt some people without biting them.
8. An insect to whom Solomon sent the sluggard for instruction.
9. A beast illustrative of the mightiest tribe.
10. An animal that carried Isaac's gifts to his bride.

VIII. RECOGNITION

Prepare a set of cards with the name of some object mentioned in the Bible on each. Each player is given several cards and in turn names the Biblical persons that these subjects suggest. Thus a lion would suggest Samson, David, etc. If the answer is correct that card is given up. The first one to dispose of all his cards is the winner.

IX. WHO ARE THEY?

Fill in the empty squares with letters forming words according to the following descriptions:

(1) The queen of the thirteenth king of Judah.
(2) The king whose life was lengthened by prayer.
(3) A country in the vicinity of Eden producing gold.
(4) The mother of Samuel the prophet.
(5) The place to which Abraham pursued the confederate kings.
(6) A Jewish prophetess.
(7) A wife of David and the mother of Adonijah.

(8) The Hebrew name of the Jewish queen that saved the Jews of Persia.
(9) The father of a Jewish cupbearer and governor.

On the Carmel and in Haran
Lived once greedy herdsmen two,
One, we know, was a heathen
And the other was a Jew.

One refused to feed some soldiers
Who once helped him watch his herds,
And the other cheated always,
No one could believe his words.

One has called himself a "white" man,
No one could to that agree,
Just to name was true the other,
As his name was so was he.

While their names in meaning differ
Yet their letters are the same,
Just reverse the name of either
And you get the other's name.

X. INITIAL LETTERS

Lists similar to the one below are distributed among the players. Only the first letter of the words in question is given, the other letters have to be filled in by the players according to the suggestive sentences that accompany each initial letter. The answers must be given in a certain time. The player answering correctly the largest number of questions wins the contest. This game may be played with any initial letter of the alphabet.

1. A – and one letter meaning a city where Joshua met with defeat.
2. A – – and two letters meaning a structure that saved the human race from destruction.
3. A – – – and three letters meaning a minor prophet.
4. A – – – – and four letters meaning the father of Moses.

7. A – – – – – – – and seven letters meaning a cruel grandmother that ruled over Judah for six years.

8. A – – – – – – – – and eight letters meaning a judge.
9. A – – – – – – – – – and nine letters meaning a Persian King who permitted Nehemiah to return to Jerusalem.

XI. MISSING LETTERS

The players are given lists as below. Each player fills in the missing letters in the given words. The descriptions opposite the words are suggestive of the correct answers. The leader corrects all the lists and the one who has the most correct answers is the winner.

The following list is only an example. Similar lists can be composed by teachers and leaders.

Example:

THE FIRST SIN

God planted a ——— in ———.

And in the midst of the garden there were the tree of ——— and the tree of ———.

And God placed ——— in the garden to watch it.

XIII. WATER

The purpose of this exercise is to review all the Biblical events and incidents that have reference to water. It consists of questions and answers. The teacher or leader may ask the questions and all others answer them. If preferred, however, the players may divide into two equal groups, the members of one group asking these questions and the members of the other group giving the answers.

This game can be played in a classroom with the teacher as leader or else with one of the players as leader. All the players are seated, the leader gives a Biblical name, saying, for example, "My name is Moses, what have I done in my life?" The first player must answer this question by reciting one of the major or minor deeds of Moses according to Biblical history. The leader continues the game by repeating the answer and adding to it "and what else have I done?" to which players are expected to give answers. The game continues in this manner until the life and deeds of Moses are thoroughly reviewed and then the leader may take the name of another historical person. Any one who fails to give a correct answer to the leader's question is eliminated from the game. The one who remains the longest in the game is the winner.

XVI. AN ALPHABET GAME

A similar game to "Initial Letters," using the letters of the alphabet as initials of a series of words can be constructed by the use of a diagram as illustrated below. All the words suggested by the descriptive sentences begin with the same letter as found in the central square. The players who receive such diagrams on cards or sheets of paper have to fill in the empty squares in a given time. The one who has the most correct answers is the winner.

Select a number of Biblical names and terms and typewrite them on lists in a twisted form, so that no two letters of any word shall come in their regular order. Distribute these lists among the players allowing them a few minutes to straighten out these words opposite the twisted words. The leader then reads the key aloud and every player checks off his own paper. A prize is given to the player who has untwisted in the given time the largest number of words. Many lists like the following can be prepared for this game:

XX. STRAY SYLLABLES

Select a group of words and write them out by syllables on small pieces of cardboard, one syllable on each card. Place these cards in a box, shuffle them, and let each player draw five syllables. The first player must give a syllable which begins any word. The other players in turn must give the missing syllables to complete the construction of that word. Any player who does not have the necessary syllable must turn to the box and draw additional syllables until he secures the right syllable. The first player to dispose of all his syllables is the winner and the others are discredited with as many points as they have syllables at the time the game ends.

Single players will find this material very interesting for individual games. The object is to construct from the stray syllables as many words as possible in the shortest time.

XXI. ACTING PROVERBS

In this game the players divide themselves into actors and spectators. The actors choose the proverbs which they will represent by acting them, each taking one or more proverbs. Then each actor appears before the rest of the company, acting his proverb, and pointing at any one of the spectators, he asks him to guess the proverb that he has acted. Only those that guess the proverbs can participate in the game. The others are eliminated. The one who guesses the most of the proverbs is the winner.

XXII. OCCUPATIONS

A set of cards is prepared with one word on each card denoting some occupation. Distribute these cards among the players. Each player in turn names one or more Biblical persons who, according to the narratives of the Bible, could be presumed at one time or another to have had that occupation, which is written on his card. Noah's name, for example, can be given for shipbuilder, Ezra's for scribe, etc.

XXIII. BIBLE GEOGRAPHY

The company is divided into two equal groups with a leader for each group. Both groups stand or sit opposite each other. The leader of one group begins the game by giving a geographical name from the Bible and supplements it with a descriptive sentence. The leader of the other group gives another geographical name that commences with the last letter of the name last given. The players on both sides help their leaders with the names. The game continues until one side fails to give the necessary names. The side that stands up the longest wins.

XXIV. PLAY ALONE

Proverbs make good material for a game for a single player. The words of several proverbs are written on cards, one word on each card. These cards are then mixed well and the player has to construct complete proverbs of these mixed words.

XXV. THE BOOKS OF THE BIBLE

Each of the following words gives in the briefest possible form the subject matter and the contents of each book of the Bible. If used in some form of a game it will help the players to familiarize themselves with the names of the books of the Bible and with the subject treated in each book. These words may be written on cards and distributed among the players, who in turn have to give the names of the books that the words represent. If preferred, all words can be placed on lists and each player is asked to supply in a given time the names of the books represented by these words. The one who hands in the most correct paper is the winner.

XXVI. WORDS

The aim of this game is to construct words of significance found in the Bible. Names of persons and places as well as other important words can be used throughout the game. The leader, after mixing the single letters in a box, gives a certain number of them to each player, leaving a large number of letters in the box. The first player places one letter on the table, this letter being the first of a word whose construction is to be completed when the other players will place the necessary letters. The second player and following players can place any letters they have, provided the letters spell out some Biblical name or term. If any player does not have the necessary letter, he must take additional letters from the box until he has the right letter for the construction of that word. When one word is completed, the construction of a new word begins in the same manner as the previous word. Thus the game continues until one of the players uses up all his letters. This player is the winner of the game; the others having to their discredit as many points as the number of letters that remain in their hands. At the end of the game period, the one who has no discredit points is the winner and all the others are graded according to the number of discredit points they have.

XXVII. SHOUTING PROVERBS

One of the players is chosen to be the first guesser. He goes out of the room and in his absence a Biblical proverb is selected, giving each of the players one of the words of that proverb. The guesser is then called in, and all the players shout their words at the same time. The confusion and the noise will make it very difficult for the guesser to guess the right proverb. If he fails to guess it, he drops out of the game. If he guesses it, he takes his place among the players. His neighbor is the next guesser and the game goes on. Those who remain among the players at the end of the game period are the winners.

XXVIII. FIFTEEN FAMOUS "JO'S"

Prepare a set of fifteen cards with one of the following questions on each card. All these questions refer to some Biblical name whose first syllable is "Jo." The cards are then distributed among the players who, in turn, give the answers to the questions of the cards they hold.

XXIX. WHAT IS IN A NAME?

This game can be played only by those who know Hebrew and have a fair knowledge of the meanings of the Hebrew names. A list containing either the names or their meanings is distributed among the players and whichever part is left out is to be supplied by the players. The player who turns in a list with the most correct answers is the winner.

Example:

Bird . . . . . Zipporah	Vanity . . . . . Abel
Bee. . . . . Deborah	Rest . . . . . Noah
Pigeon . . . . Jonah	Gracious . . . . Hannah
Princess . . . Sarah	God heard . . . Samuel
Star . . . . . Esther	Blessed be . . . Baruch

XXX. BIOGRAPHIES

Pencil and paper is provided for every player. The leader takes a set of cards with a Biblical name on each. After shuffling them he gives one card to each player. Three minutes is allowed in which every player must write in three sentences the Biography of the person whose name is found on the card. The writer of the best biography is the winner.

XXXI. WHO WAS HE?

In subject matter this game is similar to "Biographies" but it differs in the method of playing.

As all the players are seated, one begins the game by giving orally in three or four sentences a brief sketch of some Biblical character and then asking "Who is he?" The first one to give the correct answer gives a similar sketch of another person, and so on. Points are given for correct answers and sketches. The one who has the largest number of points is the winner.

XXXII. ALPHABET OF PROVERBS

A set of cards with one letter of the alphabet on each card is prepared. The cards are distributed among the players, giving each player one or more cards depending on the number of players. Then each player must give a biblical proverb commencing with the letter on the card.

If a player begins his reply with a wrong letter or does not answer at all, his letter is taken from him and he is withdrawn from the game.

Those who supply proverbs for every letter they have are the winners.

XXXIII. WORD BY WORD

All the players are seated. The leader begins the game by giving the first word of a proverb that he selected. The next player and all other players in the order as they are seated give the other words of the proverb in the proper order.

Anyone who fails to give the necessary word is withdrawn from the game. In this manner, many proverbs are given. Those who remain the longest in the game are the winners.

XXXIV. ONE QUESTION AND MANY ANSWERS

Prepare a set of eighteen cards with one of the following questions on each. Distribute them among the players and each player in turn rises and gives the answers. Since each question requires several answers, each correct answer gives the player one point. One hundred points or any agreed number of points is the goal. Play as many games as needed until one of the players completes the required number of points and he is the winner. The standing of the other players is decided by the number of points they have at the end of the game period.

1. Name four persons who disguised themselves.
2. Give the names of five towers mentioned in the Bible.
3. Name five conspiracies against kings.

XXXV. ACROSTICS

An acrostic is a composition in prose or in verse in which the initial letters of certain words form the name of a certain person or place. Such a composition is called a simple acrostic. In a double acrostic the initials and also the finals form names or words of historical significance.

The initials of the answers to the following descriptions form the name of one of the Five Books of Moses:

1. An Egyptian province where the Jews settled.
2. A woman that never had any mother.
3. The first shipbuilder.
4. A hairy man.
5. The wisest of all men.
6. The man whose bride was selected for him by his servant.
7. The second Jewish prisoner in Egypt.

Acrostics may also be composed of single words. The leader chooses a Biblical word and each player must find in a given time other Biblical words beginning with each of the letters of the chosen word. Thus if the word "Leah" is chosen, at the end of the given time some players might have:

L aban	L evi	L ot
E ve	E zra	E sau
A dam	A braham	A aron
H annah	H osea	H aman

XXXVI. ADDITIONS

2. HOA The best man in his generation
3. O A non-Jewish King
4. AA A Jewish King

XXXVII. AN ALPHABET TRIP

The players are seated and the leader starts the game by saying, "Friends, I am going on a little journey through the Bible with the alphabet as my guide. My first stop is Mt. Ararat, where Noah's ark rested. Now tell me where shall be my next stop?"

The player at whom the leader points must, without delay, give a Biblical place that commences with B and supplementing it with a sentence describing the place according to the Biblical narrative. He can say, "Go to Bethlehem, the birthplace of King David."

The third player gives a name that begins with C, and so the game goes on until the whole alphabet has been gone through, eliminating from the game those players who fail to give the necessary word when their turn comes. The winners gain some points to their credit and the one who wins the highest number of points wins the prize.

XXXVIII. EXPRESSIONS AND THEIR MEANINGS

The Bible contains many figurative expressions and it is very desirable that everyone shall be able to tell the meaning of each expression. The following list is an example of what the teacher or leader can compose for this purpose. Such lists are distributed among the players and each is expected to give all the meanings of these expressions. The holder of the best paper is the winner.

What is meant by the following expressions?

2. Cities of refuge.

XXXIX. QUOTATIONS

XXXXI. RIDDLES

1.

Just a dozen crossed a river,
So the story goes,
And they walked on land together
Where the water flows.

All of them came out safely,
This we know well,
Yet surprising is the story
All the people tell:

"At the bottom of the river,
One of them remained . . ."
Tell me, children, is it possible,
Can it be explained?

Some call me VILE, but I am not,
My name is clear and has no blot;
The VEIL I have, I never wear,
Am always frank and always fair.

I know I have some EVIL too,
And yet my wrongs are very few;
For all I do is sing and play
For those who come to God to pray.

3.

The weeping Prophet mourned for me
While I was still alive,
He gave me three, and then some more,
In all he gave me five.

A Minor Prophet gave me one,
The seventh of my name,
I needed more and asked for help,
And then this country came,

The U. S. A. — so kind and dear,
You find it in my heart,
We are so close in name and deed
And yet so far apart.

Behead me once and then again,
And I will be a prince no more,
Will lose my fame as faithful friend,
As well as that of man of war.

Will join a band of godly men,
And preach to all in street and school,
Will scold a King for evil deeds
And help the wisest prince to rule.

5.

I am the one who saved the lives of two Jews and my own life hung by a thread.

Behead me once and I will be a wicked King of Israel who slew his neighbor and took away his vineyard.

Behead me twice more and I will be the Hebrew month in which both our temples were destroyed.

The letters of the following words, if not duplicated, will give you the name of a famous mountain in Palestine.

Acre, ace, ale, alm, arc, arm, car, care, calm, came, camel, clear, cream, ear, elm, era, lame, lace, mar, male, marcel, mare, meal, ram, race, real.

7.

Take the top of the Carmel, the bottom of the Jordan, and the center of Meribah — and you will get the name of the first wanderer.

8.

Take twelve matches. Break five of them into halves and out of the seven whole matches and the ten halves, construct the name of a joyful festival.
